
SHAAAAKE!
ガタガタガタ...
What a huge earthquake!
I need to get under the table first!
The cupboard is shaking, but it isn't falling over! I'm so glad Haruki helped me secure it...
...
Creak, creak...
おさまったわ
The shaking stopped...
The glass is broken, but I'll be safe with this helmet and these slippers.
P.35
With a little cleanup, I'll be able to shelter at home.
P.34
The power is out and it's dark, but having this light makes me feel so much safer.
P.36
...I wonder how Haruki is doing now.

The next morning
It looks like the earthquake-sensing circuit breaker activated.
OFF
Click
I wonder if the power has been restored.
I' ll try turning the switch back on for now.
Billow, billow...
Oh no! A fallen appliance has caught fire! What should I do?!
Crackle...
P.37
Stay calm. If I cover it with this...
Ah—!
Whoosh
Hisssss...
Good, it' s out!*
I should have checked everything carefully before turning the breaker back on.
Phew
But being prepared for a fire really saved me!
Staying safe at home requires more than one kind of preparation.
Why not choose the preparations now that will give you peace of mind while "sheltering at home"?
